

Boosting History Subject Knowledge at KS1

History within Living Memory

The training will be led by Andrew Wrenn, a knowledgeable history specialist and an honorary fellow of the Historical Association. He is an experienced teacher, trainer and writer, former LA adviser and co-author of the HA's report on Teaching Emotive and Controversial History 3-19. Andrew recently led highly evaluated training on the impact of the new OFSTED framework on Primary History.

The National Curriculum for Key Stage 1 makes a careful distinction between history within and beyond living memory. Yet, if we are talking about events any time between a century ago and today, what do we choose to focus on?

This workshop will show how teachers can make use of artefacts and photographs to demonstrate change and continuity over time. It will show how the long lifetime of a significant individual can be explored to build a chronology of major national events, and how the recent history of Leicester itself can give pupils the opportunity to build their knowledge of their locality.

Content will be arranged around rigorous enquiry questions linked to second order concepts with suggested activities that could form the basis of a medium term plan.

Other primary history workshops are available, looking at subject knowledge at both KS1 and KS2. Workshops are also available looking at planning for the new Ofsted framework.
