

Planning in Primary Foundation Subjects for the new OFSTED Framework (with a focus on History)

The training will be led by Andrew Wrenn

Andrew is an honorary fellow of the Historical Association, an experienced trainer and writer, former LA adviser and co-author of the HA's report on Teaching Emotive and Controversial History 3-19. Andrew has previously lead CPD in Leicestershire as part of the RAF 100 commemorations in 2018.

The “Quality of Education” component of the new OFSTED framework gives unprecedented attention to the role of foundation subjects and subject leaders in the delivery of an ambitious primary curriculum.

“Deep Dives” during an OFSTED visit examine in close detail how subject leaders are meeting the requirements for intent, implementation and impact.

This practical workshop will use Primary History as an example, to show how foundation subject leaders can overhaul planning effectively to develop knowledge-rich content but which retains a creative and inspirational impact on children.

Other primary history workshops are available, looking at subject knowledge at both KS1 and KS2
